Who is looking at the moon tonight?

by Brenda Williams

- | | | | |
|---|---|----|---|
| 1 | Do you ever wonder
When you look up at the sky
Who else is looking at the moon
As the night goes by? | 10 | Could the moon be watching you?
Smiling, as the moon can do
Looking down on distant lands
Watching children holding hands. |
| 5 | Perhaps somewhere in a distant land,
Other children like to stand
And watch the moon high in the sky
As the night goes by. | 15 | The world becomes a smaller place
When children of a different place
Stand together for a while
Perhaps to talk, or laugh and smile. |

Watch and wonder, by and by

Part II: Prose – Unprepared Text

Read the following passage and answer all the questions below.

10 marks

Suddenly they heard footsteps coming towards them through the woods. The squirrels looked at each other in alarm and Mrs. Bushy Tail shot up the tree like a flash of lightning. Mr. Bushy Tail stayed behind for a moment or two in order to put some fallen leaves over the nuts in the hole, and then he too ran quickly up the tree.

Mr. Bush Tail was just that second too late to escape being seen.

‘Oh! Look! A squirrel! See, Elsie, a squirrel.... there on that branch!’

‘Oh, David, so it is! Why, there are two of them!’

For a few minutes they stood there talking and laughing and looking up into the tree, their eyes looking at every possible private corner of that tree. Mr. and Mrs. Bushy Tail looked down and to their disappointment saw that at the foot of the tree, just in front of their little storehouse, stood a boy and a girl. Suddenly the boy noticed the little heap of leaves and bent down upon his knees.

‘Look, Elsie! Look at what they have been doing!’

‘Nuts!’ exclaimed Elsie. ‘They were hiding them when we came along. They are watching us now to see what we will do!’

Two pairs of bright little eyes followed David as he picked up a nut from the hole, cracked it with his teeth, and began to chew.

‘Stop’ shouted Elsie. ‘They are winter sleepers, and might die if they cannot get food during the cold months.’

Mr. Bushy Tail was trembling with fear and anger, and his little wife was almost in tears. They were robbing their bank!

(Adapted from “Buried Treasure and Other Stories” by Angus MacIver)
